Remodeling Old Office.
The work of remodeling the old Erie telegraph station, just west of the union station, was begun today. The plans to convert the building into a railroad Y. M. C. A. will be carried out. Reading and rest rooms will be installed and various other improvements will be made. The work will be completed and the building will be ready for use at an early date.

WOULD BE TIED WITH H. V.
According to reports, a syndicate headed by Newman Erb and associates who now control a number of Western and Northwestern railroads, is negotiating for the control of the Pere Marquette. It is claimed that J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. have the dominating interests in the Pere Marquette, although their holdings are said to be less than 50 per cent of the whole.

New York financiers are of the opinion that should the Erie syndicate get control of the Pere Marquette it will be turned over to the Chesapeake and Ohio, which has been reported after the Pere Marquette on several occasions. Rumors have also linked the Canadian Pacific and Erie with the Pere Marquette. As Mr. Erb is closely associated with Edwin Hawley, who, with his friends, control the Chesapeake and Ohio, those who know the close relationship between the two financiers in railroad affairs aver that the consummation of the deal is not far away. These two recently pushed through the Minneapolis and St. Louis Iowa Central merger.

Students of railroading also point to the fact that the Pere Marquette would fit well into the extension plans of the Chesapeake and Ohio, particularly through the latter's Hocking Valley Road at Toledo. Acquisition of the Pere Marquette would add about 2400 miles to the Chesapeake and Ohio system.

Various parties to the reported negotiations decline to discuss the matter. Morgan & Co. would not deny that the plan outlined is under consideration, while a representative of the Erb interests declared all rumors premature at this time.

What Railroads Earn.

An analysis of the interstate commerce commission records reveals some startling discrepancies between the net results obtained by the different railroads in earnings per train mile run, says the Wall Street Journal. For instance, the Pennsylvania railroad, which has an average ton mile rate of 0.53 cents, earns 87 cents net over all operating expenses for every freight train run one mile. As remarked by a railroad man, these figures show that the railroad takes home after the day's work is done.

Compared with the Pennsylvania, which may be taken as a standard of railroad efficiency, the New York Central, with a higher ton rate, or 0.625 cents, earned only 54 cents for each freight train mile. The Erie, with a ton mile rate of 0.613 cents, earns 55 cents.

WM. SMITH HAS SEVERE FALL

Found Unconscious at Foot of Stairs at Depot at Noon.

William Smith, of Blaine avenue, the aged father of the late W. T. Smith, was the victim of a very severe accident Monday at noon. Mr. Smith went to the depot to mail a letter, and while there, entered the men's waiting room. A short time later he was found lying unconscious at the foot of the basement stairs, with a large laceration in the left side of his head and a badly bruised arm. It is thought that the old gentleman mistook the basement door for the waiting room entrance, and stepped forward, falling down the stairway. He is unable to tell how the accident occurred.

Dr. H. W. Sager was called, who rendered the necessary medical attention, and pronounced the injuries very severe. The extreme age of Mr. Smith, who is over 80 years old, will no doubt greatly retard his recovery.

NOVEL AND DAINTY SANDWICHES

Every hostess, when entertaining, racks her brain for something that will be a little different from those served by her friends. When preparing the sandwiches why not use fancy cutters instead of the squares and triangles which have been the thing so long? Some will say, "there is so much waste in using cutters." That is true, but those scraps need not be wasted, and sandwiches of this kind are so much more attractive, a point that every entertainer strives for.

The greater variety of cutters you possess the more stylish will be your refreshments.

The hardest part of making sandwiches is in cutting the bread thin enough.

The more water-like, the more dainty they are. To make especially nice sandwiches, the crust of the bread is removed. The butter used for spreading sandwiches should be creamed until soft and waxy. Nuts chopped and mixed with cream cheese will make most delectable sandwich filling.

When meat is used it is better to chop it and add the desired seasonings and milk or cream to make it of the consistency to spread.

Spanish peppers pounded to a paste and mixed with cream cheese is another tasty combination. An excellent sweet sandwich is maple sugar grated and mixed with chopped almonds, or marmalade or preserved gingered pears make a nice filling, chopped fine.

Fish pounded to a paste and mixed with a little salad dressing makes good sandwiches.

Preserved ginger chopped and thinned to spread with some of the sirup is another favorite with those who are fond of ginger.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Gas, Dyspepsia and Other Stomach Misery Ended With a Little Diapiesin.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of distension, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion.

A full course of Pappe's Diapiesin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case someone else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why Diapiesin always relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapiesin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat, besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many Diapiesin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for indigestion or gastritis or any other stomach misery. Get some Pappe's Diapiesin now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion.

FRANCIS B. HARRISON and LOLLIE JAMES.

Statesmen who are hoping for a united sentiment in Congress in support of remedial measures, following the tariff board's report upon the wool tariff, fear William Jennings Bryan is going to take up the cudgels for free raw wool. Bryan is scheduled to speak at the Jackson day banquet in Washington. It has been intimated by the Nebraska wool growers that the Democratic free wool doctrine, Rep. Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, and Rep. Lollie James, of Kentucky, members of the House ways and means committee, are among the Democrats who still state that they are opposed to any duty whatever on raw wool, and that when consideration of schedule K is taken up, they will use every effort toward the elimination of the present tax.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 7.—Two rooms in the federal building here were prepared today for the occupancy of Otis E. McManis, member of the demagogue, who is coming here to testify in the federal investigation of the alleged dynamiting conspiracy. The government will keep two guards constantly with McManis and according to present plans he will not leave the federal building during his stay in Indianapolis. The confessed dynamiter is expected to arrive here Monday.

R. J. Cook, a former bookkeeper of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, who has been in Los Angeles, is believed to have testified before the federal grand jury today. He is reported to have important information bearing on the relations between John J. and James H. McNamara and the alleged "higher law" in the dynamiting conspiracy. Only a short session of the grand jury was held today.

BRYAN HAS

Supporters of the presidential preferential primary were enthusiastically confident when the committee went into session. Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, leading proponent of the plan, asserted that he was assured the support of a majority of the committee. Colonel Bryan was one of the leaders in the fight for the resolution which was identical with that voted down at the recent meeting of the Republican national committee. It recommended the presidential primary to the various state committees for adoption.

Bryan's motion was made after Mack announced that Wetherly had officially seated. If the Nebraska motion were adopted it would declare the Alabama man a member of the committee by the committee's own action and established the committee's jurisdiction in such cases.

Bryan at first wasted any time in showing his determination to fight.

Wetherly's name was called first on the roll and the regular order of business was halted right there. While Bryan was urged not to make any fight against Guffey, as the latter had the votes to win, he privately asserted that in order to be consistent he would have to oppose the seating of the Pennsylvania man. A Mitchell Palmer, who protested Guffey's seat, was in the motion, holding the proxy of Committee Chairman Nebecker, of Utah.

It was quite apparent from the attitude of Chairman Mack and the machine leaders in the committee that Bryan's fight was well hopeless. Mack had immediately at hand the resolution of the last convention, which placed the power of seating national committeemen solely in the hands of the state committees and was evidently prepared to declare that he committed had no jurisdiction when Palmer protested against the seating of Guffey on his state committee credentials.

Bryan's appeal from Mack's decision in the Alabama case was lost, 23 to 13, after a bitter squabble behind closed doors.

Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, gave Senator Lee, of Tennessee, a proxy to attend the committee's sessions and the Tennessee man went into the executive session determined to fight bitterly for the seating of Robert E. Lee Mountcastle as national committeeman from his state.

After disposing of the Alabama question, another row erupted as to whether the committee should immediately take up the Pennsylvania contest or postpone it until later.

It was three-quarters of an hour after the "schedule" time when the committee got down to business. Bryan was greeted with a round of applause. Mack was sharply greeted.

Before the committee went into executive session a resolution was adopted setting 3 o'clock this afternoon as

Morse believe they will be able to impress a majority of the council with the desirability of having the minister's life.

Crime a Horrible One.
According to those conversant with the real facts in connection with the administration of the poison, the crime was even worse than the state even thought it could prove.

The minister had been told by the girl that she was in a delicate condition and appealed to him to "right the wrong" he had done her. He had promised that he would do so and when he met her on the afternoon of the day she died, October 14, he had with him the deadly cyanide of potassium, with which he planned to end her life.

They met by appointment in front of the Hotel Touraine and took a walk to a little cafe at the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets. There they had luncheon together and at that time the minister gave the girl the deadly drug and told her that if she took it she would be saved from disgrace. She promised that she would take it and they parted.

The minister leaving the girl he had so cruelly deceived at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Commonwealth avenue, with a hand shake and swinging himself on a car he went to the home of Miss Edmunds. It was because he was at that place that afternoon that Richeson at first thought he could build up his alibi. However, it is understood that the district attorney had two witnesses, who, while they could not positively identify the minister or the girl from photographs, they were prepared to testify that a man who "looked like the minister" met the girl in the cafe and the district attorney expected to show by the Edmunds family that the time of arrival at the home of Richeson corresponded with the time he must have left the girl.

Lawson Demands Death.

District Attorney Pollett received today a letter from Thomas W. Lawson, in which the financier demands that the prosecution insist that Richeson be executed for his crime. Among other things, he says:

"For God's sake and for humanity's sake and for the sake of the countless dependents upon you and those situated like you—otherwise helpless mothers, wives and daughters—adhere to your stand."

"Better a million times that we of the child-blood north take example by our virtue, worshipping, unbridled, license hating brother of the south and lynch, back and burn that that we stand idly by and let the cleared-brained sentimentalists police our highways and byways and schools and churches—a million times better."

"It is possible that the sentimental vision of the sorrow and miseries of the vilely criminal are going to drive the fathers, husbands and brothers of our land to make the rope, the gun and the torch the companions of their plows and bibles. It's up to you, Mr. District Attorney, and to your brothers of the law to answer, and heaven help you and them if your answer wins the applause of the yellow brained, propagators of inhuman crime."

Tells Details of Crime.

Richeson's confession as made public, was full of details. It is understood, however, that he enlarged on it in conversation and possibly in writing to his counsel and that the district attorney is now in possession of most of the information which has come to the defense. While no persons can be quoted as responsible for it, the statement is made on high authority that Richeson's amplified confession to his counsel was on the following lines:

After purchasing a quantity of cyanide of potassium from William Hahn, a Newton Center druggist, on October 13, the minister took the poison to his rooms in Cambridge. A few days later he borrowed from Mrs. Frank H. Carter, in whose home he was a lodger, an earthenware mixing bowl, "to make some book paste."

Mixes Poison Capsule.

Returning the bowl to Mrs. Carter an hour or two later, he warned her to be sure to wash it out thoroughly, saying "I have been mixing poison in it." It was in this bowl, and at this time, it is said, that the minister by mixing cyanide of potassium with flour and water, made the capsule which ultimately caused Miss Linnell's death. This was Thursday, October 12.

On Saturday, October 14, Richeson met by appointment his old-time friend, who still believed herself his intended wife. Following their custom, the couple had a short walk, and then went into a Boylston street cafe. Here they had luncheon, after which they took another walk, this time to the Fenway.

Gives Girl Poison.

It was while seated on a secluded bench in the park, after the girl had again told him of her worry over her physical condition, saying she feared it was becoming apparent to her friends, and had once more entreated him to procure some remedy for her, that the minister is said to have handed the girl the capsule, declaring it was a medicine which would certainly act in the manner she desired. He directed her as to the manner of taking it and then the pair walked to the car line.

Miss Linnell went to her room in the Young Women's Christian Association house, while Richeson boarded a trolley car for Brookline, going to the home of Miss Violet Edmunds, the wealthy heiress whom he was to have married a few weeks later. Meeting her elum, Miss Lucille Zeigler, Avis said she had been walking with her "friend" (by which Miss Zeigler understood she meant Richeson) and complained of a headache as her excuse for hurrying to her room. A few hours later she was found unconscious in the bathroom and died without regaining consciousness.
